Impact Report 2022

Northeastern graduate student Rahul wasn't sure how much he could help his tutee Orlando (8th grade) with his chemistry homework. They dove into learning together, but Rahul still felt he wasn't helping. "Actually you are being really helpful," Orlando told him. "I would've given up on this worksheet on the second question if you weren't here."

In their first Tutoring session, Abby (NEU '26) got creative to connect with her 5th-grade tutee Julieta, who is still learning English. The pair started by drawing – Abby drew a ghost and Julieta added a hat, then Abby drew a cat. Then Julieta pointed and said her family has lots of cats and she loves them – in English! Drawings are helping Julieta open up to her new tutor.
